KANSAS CITY — Barstool Sports, one of the most influential sports, lifestyle and entertainment media brands on the internet recently launched a philanthropic initiative in partnership with New Amsterdam Vodka to support the renovation efforts of selected Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) Posts in the lower 48 states. Through this partnership, New Amsterdam Vodka and Barstool Sports seek to make a meaningful difference in the lives of veterans by providing much-needed assistance to a pillar of support within their communities.

Recognizing the invaluable contributions of VFW Posts across the United States, Barstool Sports and New Amsterdam Vodka are committed to giving back to those who have selflessly served their country. Through the campaign, the aim is to raise funds to support the renovation of the common areas of selected VFW Posts, providing veterans with an improved space to gather, connect, and receive support.

As an extension of this initiative, New Amsterdam Vodka has generously pledged $50,000, further amplifying the impact of the campaign. As part of the fundraising effort, Barstool Sports has launched a limited-edition t-shirt collection, with 100% of the net proceeds being donated to support the campaign.

“We are incredibly honored to partner with New Amsterdam Vodka for this campaign,” said Matthew “Chaps” Cothron, Marine Corps veteran and co-host of Barstool Sports’ podcast Zero Blog Thirty. “The VFW has played a vital role in supporting veterans for more than 123 years, and for us to help improve a Post’s facilities, creating a more welcoming and comfortable space for veterans to come together and find support, is just a small token of
